The Road Less (and Less) Travelled

The decision to pick up and move is a complex one. Migrating involves both direct costs – the move itself – and indirect, opportunity costs, or the foregone benefits of staying put. Moving a household exacerbates this complexity.

Getting Old as a Migrant

A close look at the ageing process betrays a complex interaction of demographic policies and factors. Old age care arrangements are a window into that interaction. But what does this mean when the ageing process also affects the migrant population?

Social Inequality Across the Generations - The Role of Compensation and Multiplication in Resource Accumulation

This report provides an innovative perspective on social stratification studies by advancing the theoretical and empirical case for the influence of resource compensation. It examines whether resource compensation is a successful mechanism for social mobility, contrasting it against competing types of resource accumulation such as multiplication.
